Having graduated from the Mailman School a decade ago, I continue to benefit from the school's unparalleled instruction and multifaceted support for students and alumni. I currently focus on grants, healthcare consumer education, and program implementation at a healthcare nonprofit; my career also has traversed the areas of social services and research. At this time in Mailman's history—with widespread recognition of the importance of public health education, infrastructure, and leadership—I am excited to join the Mailman Alumni Board and contribute to Mailman's talented community to fulfill a vision of public health for the 21st century.
